Boston Has New Charter.

Galveston, Houston, Tex., and Chelsea, Mass., were all instanced to show how a big calamity sometimes makes a city get down to business principles and all these had reorganized under the commission system. Boston also had recently adopted a new charter along similar lines and is now to be governed under the latest election by nine individuals.

But Norwich, said Mr. Thayer, will sit still until something wakes them up and will likely be the last city in the country to get into line with the modern idea of city government, Everybody knows we are not doing business in the way it ought to be done, for we are living under a charter that is 125 years old.

spoke of foreign missions as seen by her in her tour around the world. By way of introduction, Rev. G. H. Ewing spoke of this as the centennial year of the A. B. C. F. M. and of its first five missionaries who went to India. One of them, Rev. Adoniram Judson, went to Burmah and later worked under the Baptist board of missions.

Mrs. Roath said: It was my mother who first interested me in missions. I came home from this tour with a greater impression than ever before of the need of foreign missions. Across the Atlantic, to Gibraltar, and to Algiers. In Algiers, to a Mohammedan mosque, taking off my shoes before entering. It was bare and unattractive. In the street pupils were sitting about their teacher, studying the Koran aloud. We had two hours in Alexandria, seeing Pompey's Pillar and St. Mark's church.

Then on to Cairo. Bible scenes and stories were brought to mind. We visited the little Coptic church said to have retained the pure form of religion since the time of Christ. Mohammedan mosques are everywhere; one mosque is converted into a university where are thousands of students and hundreds of teachers—all studying the Koran. In the streets were many blind people, there were little babies whose eyes were covered with flies and who had no care. At a funeral the hired mourners were blind. It is considered a merit to be blind.

Leaving Cairo, we took the steamer at Suez for Ceylon. A missionary was on the boat whose work was in the New Hebrides. From Ceylon on to India and to Madura. We first saw the great Hindu temple in Madura with its god which was covered with pats of butter, the cow being sacred in India. Hiring a carringe, I was taken by mistake to Mr. Zumbro's school instead of to his home. Later I found Mrs. Zumbro on her piazza. very glad to see someone from Norwich.

Give the Women the Ballot.

Now, said Mr. Thayer, the mayor gets the blame for everything, when a really he has no power to correct the things for which he is blamed. There is no responsible head, and it is the experience everywhere that everybody tries to shirk his duty when there's anything difficult about it. We need a business administration now more than ever before, for we are in business on a larger scale and in a position to lose more money than ever before. Now we are running at a profit, but if you are to submit our large busines interests to the fortunes of graft and politics we can all tell what will become of the water department and the gas and electric works. I can't be a suffragette, but I'm with tilem. Give the ballot to the women and see what will happen to the open saloon and on the question of government. Will they vote for the man who hangs around the saloon or the other kind of man? We've seen within the last eighteen months one of the best policemen on the force pulled of his beat because he pulled a gambling place and a bandy house. We've seen his head snapped off and another man put on his beat who didn't see things. If it's your pocket that is affected you can afford to put a competent man at the head of the city to government at a salary of $5,000, but you'll never get a new charter as long as the people sit down, but you must

We must send more missionaries to tell these people of a better way to serve God. People who come to America do have a chance to hear of God, but there so many have no chance. Think of missions, pray for missions. Do let foreign missions have a wider interest in your thoughts and is interest in your thoughts and in your prayers in the future.

work on the two-story addition on the south.

The new weave shed will accommodate $4 looms, and with the exception of 12 new looms, which have recently been received from the manufacturers in France, the present looms will be moved from the old weave room into the addition and set up. This work of moving the looms is now being done and the change will give needed space for winding and warping machinery. The finishing floor has been completed in the weave shed and painters are now working there.

On the south addition, which is two stories high and runs the entire width of the mill, the brick work is almost done, there being a little pointing up left, and the roof has been fullshed. The carpenters are now laying the floor, which, with all the other necessary work, will occupy at least an month. The first floor of the ca haif of this addition which is 300 feet long and 37 feet wide, w
